TASTING NOTES

NOSE

Upon the first nosing, intense aromas of ashy, cold campfire smoke emerge, accompanied by earthy notes. A subtle sweetness of honey and vanilla harmonizes with a pronounced sea breeze reminiscent of salty seawater. This combination imparts deep complexity and authenticity to the whisky.

PALATE

On the palate, the whisky is oily and full-bodied. Fresh citrus notes, especially lemon zest, meet chalky hints and a touch of medicinal iodine, reminiscent of bandages. The voluminous smoke is complemented by nuances of heather and a slight nuttiness, adding depth and complexity to the whisky.

FINISH

The finish is medium-length, characterized by a salty, seawater-like note. A light fruit sweetness emerges, while the lingering campfire smoke provides a warming conclusion. The complexity of the finish both surprises and delights.

THOUGHTS

MARCEL

A whisky that immediately captivates with its smoky campfire aroma and salty sea breeze – here you can taste the wild soul of Islay. The Dun Naomhaig Bay Batch 1 is not a light dram, but a characterful one that's great fun and tells new stories with every nosing.

SASCHA

With a balanced blend of intense smokiness, fresh citrus notes, and complex spice, this Islay whisky reveals an impressive structure. The medium-length, salty-fruity finish rounds off the bottling with technical precision and confirms Feinkost Reifferscheid's knack for harmonious single malts.
