Thousand Mountains (2018/2022) Ex-Red Wine & Ex-Bourbon in Ex-Moscatele Finish - Genusraum Paderborn

A Sauerland "Single Cask" that has seen three casks in four years – anyone who still believes in simple categories probably also believes in unicorns. That doesn't mean this isn't a genuine single cask, since the term is not regulated for German whisky, at least. But you're allowed to raise an eyebrow.

TASTING NOTES

NOSE

Plum is immediately in the room, flanked by raisin and cinnamon. Plus tobacco, leather, and this Moods cigarillos note that smells more like a drawer than a humidior. Overall it comes across like a classic sherry profile – just with the slightly overmotivated signature of a cask marathon.

PALATE

Earthy and with an oily mouthfeel, plus plum, dates, and raisins in dense succession. Marsala flashes up and pushes the sweetness toward dessert wine. At the same time, a touch of youth remains and a trace of artificial fruit notes that show: intense can sometimes be louder than it is rounded.

FINISH

Long and warming, slight tingling, yet dry. Raisiny, with tobacco leaf and cinnamon as an echo.

THOUGHTS

MARCEL

Amazingly mature for four years of maturation time, which, given the cask career, doesn't necessarily have to be a wonder. Exciting in any case!

SASCHA

Quite clearly short, rough maturation: lots of pressure, lots of aroma, little polish. Intense, but not yet rounded off – as if you were disturbing the whisky while growing up. That's not necessarily a bad thing, but it definitely requires the right expectations.
